Tips to protect students and their devices on campus

College classes will soon be back in session across the country, and thousands of students will arrive on campus with mobile devices.

Many of them have developed a very close relationship with their mobile devices: they carry them throughout the day, check them frequently, and even sleep with them nearby at night. (747-3388)

Although mobile devices allow them to instantly connect with friends and family, to access the internet, get directions, chart workouts, make purchases, this increased convenience also comes at an increased risk.

Many of these online activities require them to provide personal information such as their name, email address, account number, and credit card information. This puts them at an increased risk of having this information compromised by cyber criminals.

To lessen the danger posed by these risks, they should follow these tips from the Department of Homeland Security:

- Keep private information private

Avoid sharing their full name, address, and other personal information online. Frequently check a website's privacy options to ensure they have enabled the highest level of privacy as options may get updated or changed completely.

- When in doubt, throw it out

Links in emails, tweets, posts, and online advertisements are often how cybercriminals compromise their computer or mobile device. If it looks suspicious, it's best to delete it, even if they know the source. If appropriate, mark the message as "junk email" so that future messages from the sender do not end up in their inbox.

- Set strong passwords

Setting passwords that are long, unique, and hard to guess is one of the most important things they can do to protect their online accounts. Changing passwords regularly and using different passwords for different accounts goes a long way to protecting their online information.

The average college student brings 7 Internet-connected devices to campus.

Smartphones • Notebooks • Tablets • Gaming Consoles
• Fitness Trackers • Smartwatches • SmartTVs

Source: Campuslogic, July 2016. "The Internet of Things"

- Secure their accounts

Ask for protection beyond passwords. Many websites now offer additional ways to verify the user's identity before they conduct business on their sites, such as two-factor authentication. (766-3429)

- Secure their mobile device

In order to prevent theft and unauthorized access, use a passcode to lock their mobile device and always lock it when it's not in use. Never leave their mobile device unattended in a public place.

WE HAVE ALL THE INTERNET SPEED YOU NEED!

Our unlimited Internet is the fastest around. Depending on where you live, you can get 10Mb, 25Mb or 250Mb Internet.

10/1Mb - $39.95/mo

25/3Mb - $54.95/mo

Giving you MORE Internet

We upgraded our Internet speeds June 1. Thanks to the fiber technology installed over the past years, FMCTC was equipped to bring you all-new, crazy fast Internet speeds.

Over the next few years, how all of us use the Internet (more importantly, how much bandwidth we use) is going to change. (741-3224)

Just a few years ago, for most of us, Internet usage primarily consisted of reading and writing emails and viewing web pages. Today, we shop, bank, live chat, work, and access news and information. And because more industries are using the Internet as their delivery system, (sharing photos, listening to the radio, watching full-length movies and television shows all from the comfort from our PC, laptop, tablet), your need for faster Internet speeds and more bandwidth is only going to continue to grow.

Still, whether you need 10Mb or 100Mb, won't really be determined by how many of those activities you will be doing, but rather how many devices in your household will be sharing this bandwidth at the same time. (782-3221)

In other words, a household with a laptop, a tablet, a gaming console, a smartphone, a smart TV, a smart watch, a smart security system, and remotely controlled thermostats will need more megabytes to deliver better service.

The bottom line is that FMCTC has made important strides in expanding broadband access, but there is still work to be done. And FMCTC will be leading the charge. (744-3160)
