Stay on the lookout for these phishing red flags

With phishing scams becoming more commonplace every day it's best to brush up on major phishing red flags so you can spot a suspicious email when it lands in your inbox.

Phishing is an attempt to get hold of personal, financial or otherwise sensitive information like passwords, usernames and account numbers. A successful phishing scam will get people to volunteer information by camouflaging itself as a routine communication, often an email message, from a trusted source like a friend, colleague, bank, or company. (747-3113)

Phishing emails and messages can have all the look and feel of a regular communication, but there are a few giveaways to look out for. Never share personal information like passwords, usernames or account numbers through email. If something ever feels 'phishy,' chances are it is.

Here are some common red flags to indicate an email or message is not what it seems.

It asks for accounts or passwords

Phishing schemes typically ask for personal information. If you ever get an email that asks you to reset your password immediately, it's wise to avoid clicking on links in the message. Bad actors will often create incredibly convincing replicas of things like a banking site in order to phish logins and passwords.

Account security can be easily confirmed through trusted channels and services directly. So, let's say you get an email that appears to be from Twitter about your account security. The email suggests resetting your password and provides a link to do so. (748-3431)

Here's an easy safe way to determine if your account is secure. Open a browser window and login in to your Twitter account as you normally would. If you get in, there's no issue. You can reset your password if you choose...just not by clicking in a link in an email.

It has an urgent feel

Phishing messages will try to rattle recipients by suggesting action must be taken immediately. The messaging will make it seem like every minute counts or tell you to "act now" to secure your account.

If you're concerned about time sensitivity, bypass the email itself (never click on the link) to get in touch with the service through a trusted channel. Just as the example above, it is best to open a new browser, log in and check things out.

URLs and email addresses are off

URLs and email addresses can leave clues and signs that point to phishing. Check links by hovering your cursor over text to reveal actual destinations. This will be displayed in the bottom corner of your browser.

Make sure links include `https://` at the beginning of the web address. The "s" in this case signifies a secure link.

Email addresses may make subtle, difficult to catch spelling errors. For instance using "nn" where an "m" should appear or switching a couple of letters around. Let's face it, we tend to skim when sorting through our inboxes. Taking an extra couple of seconds to confirm sources and links can make all the difference when it comes to security. (755-1328)

Trust no one

Remember, if one of your contacts gets hacked, you're vulnerable too. Beware that phishing emails can come from users and email addresses that look totally credible. You can always confirm odd looking or sounding email messages with the sender through another channel like a reliable phone call. They'll thank you for it in the long run. # 2100 checks mailed to members

FMCTC recently distributed over 2100 reasons why it is great to be a Farmers Mutual Cooperative Telephone Company member! "2100" is the number of patronage dividend checks that were issued this past year.

The patronage amount totaling $647,037 included 100% of 2004 allocations, as well as 13% of special allocations for the Rural Telephone Bank stock redemption and the sale of the Verizon cellular partnership. (766-3234)

The dollar amount for each check is determined by the amount of money the member spends on FMCTC services such as phone, internet, digital tv, long distance, phone features like Caller ID & voice mail, 800 toll free numbers, web hosting, and miscellaneous purchases like business phone systems, telephone wire and jacks.

For a variety of reasons, patronage checks are sometimes unclaimed. We've included a listing of members' names who have unclaimed patronage in this newsletter. Please check this list to see if your name appears. If so, you have money waiting for you!

In 2017...

- The AVERAGE patronage check issued to members was $189.46.
- The LARGEST patronage check issued to members was $8500.
- $77,234.84 of patronage remains unclaimed. Check page 4 of this newsletter to see if your name is listed.
- Over $10 million in patronage dividends have been returned to FMCTC member/owners since 1993.

Over $77,000 patronage remains unclaimed

See the next page for an alphabetical list of members' names who have unclaimed patronage. If you see your name on the list, please contact our office at 712-744-3131 or 1-800-469-3511. If you know someone on the list, please contact them and tell them to contact our office.
